Nadal and Ivanovic make history in Paris

Rafael Nadal confirmed he is king of clay at Roland Garros on Sunday by lifting the trophy for a fourth time, emulating Bjorn Borg's record of winning four in a row at the French Grand Slam.

The previous day, 20-year-old Ana Ivanovic established her position at the top of the women's rankings by defeating Grand Slam final debutante Dinara Safina 64 63 in the women's final to win her first major. The 2007 runner-up had become the first Serbian woman to clinch the world No. 1 spot after winning her semifinal contest over Jelena Jankovic, on a day where both Serbs and Svetlana Kuznetsova were all bidding to become world No. 1 for the first time in their careers.

For Nadal, it was another extraordinary victory which topped two weeks of flawless tennis, during which he lost just 41 games in total. He swept past Roger Federer 61 63 60 in just one hour 48 minutes to take the title, marking Federer's worst-ever loss at a Grand Slam and the fewest games conceded in a Roland Garros final since 1977, and ending the Swiss's dream of completing the career Grand Slam for another year.

"I think I played an almost perfect match. Roger played more mistakes than usual and I played more inside the court. I improved a little bit since last year. I have more control of the points, I am more aggressive than usual," said Nadal.

Nadal joins Bjorn Borg as the only two players to win four in a row at Roland Garros, and the Spaniard also became the third player after Ilie Nastase and Borg to win the tournament without conceding a set.

Ivanovic, playing in her third Grand Slam final, relied on her experience to power through a gritty performance against an equally unsettled Safina. "Winning a Grand Slam is something I dreamt of since I was a little kid, so achieving that goal is very thrilling," she said, after being presented with the Suzanne Lenglen Cup by four-time Roland Garros champion Justine Henin.

ITF begins Olympic entry process

The entry process for the 2008 Olympic Tennis Event in Beijing begins this week, with the ITF notifying National Associations and National Olympic Committees (NOCs) of the players eligible for direct acceptance into the singles and doubles (top 10 only) events and sending out application forms for ITF places.

Fifty-six players will qualify as direct acceptances into both the men's and women's singles events. Six ITF Places will be allocated by the ITF Olympic Committee, while the two Tripartite Commission Invitation Places have already been announced.

National Associations/NOCs have until 23 June to confirm the entry of players eligible for direct acceptance and to return the application form for ITF places. At the same time, National Associations/NOCs will nominate doubles teams for the Olympic Tennis Event. The ITF will announce the full list of entries on 2 July.

“Obviously I was nervous. I wanted to make one step more and win a title,” she added. The last two Slams were a great learning experience for me so that kept some pressure off me. There was a lot of emotions inside but till the last point I tried not to think about the occasion and just focus on my tennis. I was really happy I managed to do that today.”

The doubles event also offered fairytale stories for its champions, with Anabel Medina Garrigues tasting Grand Slam success for the first time as she and 34-year-old Virginia Ruano Pascual came from a set down to defeat Casey Dellacqua and Francesca Schiavone 26 75 64 in the womens doubles final. It was Ruano Pascual's 40th career title and ninth Grand Slam trophy in doubles.

Luis Horna, a member of the ITF Grand Slam Team in the 1990s, and Pablo Cuevas became the first South American team to win a Grand Slam doubles title. The unseeded pair, who were responsible for ousting the Bryan brothers in the quarterfinals, defeated doubles stalwarts and No. 2 seeds Daniel Nestor and Nenad Zimonjic 62 63 in the final. Zimonjic was also on the losing side in the mixed doubles, as he and Katarina Srebotnik lost out to third seeds Bob Bryan and Victoria Azarenka 62 76.

Three days after receiving their 2007 ITF World Champions trophies in Paris, Shingo Kunieda (JPN) and Esther Vergeer (NED) retained their Roland Garros Masters Series men's singles and women's singles wheelchair titles.

Martin Legner (AUT) caused the only upset in the elite field of eight players in the men's singles, by defeating world No. 4 Maikel Scheffers (NED) 64 75 in the first round. World No. 2 Robin Ammerlaan (NED) saw a 52 first set lead disappear against world No. 3 Stephane Houdet (FRA), but held on for a 76(2) 61 victory. Ammerlaan then beat Legner 63 63, while Kunieda overcame Ronald Vink (NED) in the semifinals 76(5) 62 to set up a rematch of last year's final.

World No.1 Kunieda made a superb start to the final, speeding through the first set in just 15 minutes, but Ammerlaan fought back in the second and Kunieda needed a tiebreak before wrapping up a 60 76(5) victory.

World No.5 Florence Gravellier (FRA) thrilled the home fans with a 57 64 63 first round win over world No 4 Sharon Walraven (NED) in the women's singles, but Gravellier's bid to reach the final for the second successive year ended when she was beaten 64 64 by world No.2 Korie Homan (NED) in the semifinals. Vergeer beat her compatriots Jiske Griffioen and Aniek Van Koot for the loss of a total of just five games en route to the final. The world No.1 then produced another dominant performance to beat Homan 62 62 and extend her incredible winning streak to 326 matches.

Top seeds Ammerlaan and Vink were forced to a deciding championship tiebreak before beating Houdet and Peifer 61 16 [10-6] in their opening men's doubles match, but their luck ran out in the final when second seed Kunieda and Scheffers clinched the title 62 75. Griffioen and Vergeer successfully defended their women's doubles title, beating Homan and Walraven 64 64 in an all-Dutch women's doubles final.

Yang and Halep triumph at Roland Garros

Tsung-Hua Yang became Chinese Taipei's first ever Junior Roland Garros champion on Sunday following a 63 76 victory over Poland's Jerzy Janowicz. Simona Halep overcame Elena Bogdan 64 67 62 in the first all-Romanian girls' Junior Grand Slam final. "This is big. Very big," said 17-year-old Yang. "Before in my country nobody ever won this tournament so I'm very happy."

Unseeded Yang came through some tough matches to make it to the final. He was pushed to the limit in the first round by Takanyi Garanganda (ZIM) 63 26 97 and in the quarterfinals by Russia's Evgeny Donskoy 46 63 86. Yang then defeated second seed Cesar Ramirez (MEX) in the semifinals 64 61. Twelfth seed Janowicz scored an impressive 64 64 victory over Italian Junior Open winner Guido Pella (ARG), who had put out top seed Bernard Tomic (AUS) in the previous round.

Halep was relieved to have picked up her first Junior Grand Slam title with a hard-fought victory over her good friend and fellow ITF/Grand Slam Touring Team member Bogdan. "It's a big result for me. I played good all the matches," said Halep. "Today I had very big emotions because it was a big match for me. But I won. I don't know how, but I won."

Ninth seed Halep came into the tournament having won the Grade A Italian Junior Open title and was imperious en route to the final not losing more than five games in a match until the semifinal. In comparison, Bogdan had to fight hard for her place in the final, with a 16 75 86 win over Bojana Jovanovski (SRB) in the quarterfinals and in the semifinals against Lenka Jurikova (SVK).

Henri Kontinen (FIN), a current ITF Touring Team member, and Christopher Rungkat (INA), a former member of ITF touring teams, and currently aided by the Grand Slam Development Fund, won the boys doubles while Polona Hercog (SLO) and Jessica Moore (AUS) took the girls doubles title.

Invacare World Team Cup gets underway

The 2008 Invacare World Team Cup starts today in Cremona, Italy with matches in men's World Group 2 and the junior event. The other three events begin on Tuesday. The seedings for all events were announced as follows:

Men's World Group I: 1. Netherlands, 2. France, 3. Japan, 4. Sweden, 5. Poland, 6. Austria, 7. USA, 8. Korea.

Men's World Group II: 1. Belgium, 2. Great Britain, 3. Germany, 4. Canada, 5. Chile, 6. Switzerland, 7. Russia, 8. South Africa.

Women: 1. Netherlands, 2. Korea, 3. USA, 4. Japan, 5. France, 6. Great Britain, 7. China, 8. Italy.

Quads: 1. USA, 2. Netherlands, 3. Great Britain, 4. Sweden

Juniors: 1. Great Britain, 2. Netherlands, 3. Argentina, 4. USA.

Double Triumph for Sema Sisters

Japan's Yurika and Erika Sema won the women's doubles at the $25,000 ITF Women's Circuit tournament in Gunma, to give them their second doubles title following victory in Nagano. The sisters are now at a career high doubles ranking with Erika at 261 and elder sister Yurika at 253.

Sinisa Markovic and Aldin Setkic made history in Prijedor when becoming the first two Bosnian players to contest a singles final. The men, both Davis Cup players, competed in front of packed stands, with victory going to Markovic 62 63.

Three top 100 ranked players are in action this week. Martina Muller (GER) and Maret Ani (EST) are competing in Marseille while Yvonne Meusburger (AUT) is the top seed in Zlin, Czech Republic.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Obituaries

The ITF was saddened to learn of the deaths of Barry Lorge and Horst Skoff.

Lorge, the former sports editor of the San Diego Union, passed away at home in Coronado, California after a long battle with cancer. He was 60.

During Lorge's career he worked as a tennis writer on The Washington Post and contributed to Tennis magazine before landing his role as sports editor at the San Diego Union.

Skoff, an Austrian tennis player, died from a heart attack at the age of 39.

During his career Skoff won four tournaments and reached a career high ranking of No. 18. He played the longest Davis Cup singles match (since the introduction of the tiebreak) defeating Mats Wilander in 6 hours, 4 mins in 1989.
