On court today:

- In Bologna, Italy will have the opportunity to entertain the home crowd, safe in the knowledge that their place at the Final 8 Knockout Stage is secure following Brazil's victory over Belgium on Saturday. Their opponents, Netherlands, on the other hand will know that they must produce a strong performance if they are to progress to Malaga this year. These teams met in the quarterfinals in 2023, with Italy winning in a deciding doubles match – and, with every tie in Bologna this week having ended 2-1, another close battle could be in the offing today.
- In Valencia, Australia and Spain with the 2 nations bidding to end the week as the winners of Group B. The 2 nations boast 34 Davis Cup titles between them – but this will be just their 6th meeting in the competition and their first for more than 2 decades. Four of their previous meetings have come in the final, with Australia recording title-victories in 1965, 1967 and 2003, while Spain defeated Australia to win their first Davis Cup title in 2000. Both nations have impressed so far this week, with victories against Czechia and France securing a place in the Final 8 Knockout Stage for both teams – and they will both be keen to carry the momentum into Malaga with another win today.
- In Zhuhai, Slovakia and Chile both have the chance to end a tough week on a positive note when they contest their 4th Davis Cup clash today. The teams have both lost back-to-back ties against Germany and USA without winning a match – meaning that at least one of the pair will manage a match-win this afternoon. Slovakia will hope to end their debut appearance in the Davis Cup Finals with a victory, while Chile are aiming to finish in 3rd place at the Finals Group Stage for the 2nd straight year.
- In Manchester, Great Britain face a hugely challenging day, as they will know that they have to record a 3-0 victory against Canada if they are to advance to the quarterfinals for the 2nd straight year. Argentina sealed their place in the Final 8 Knockout Stage on Saturday with victory over Finland – and the Canadians and Brits will be desperate to join them. This will be just the 3rd Davis Cup meeting between the 2 teams, and Great Britain are aiming to maintain their unbeaten record against Canada. Having lost to Argentina on Friday, a response is necessary as they look to ensure that the tens of thousands of home fans at the AO Arena go home happy this evening.
