Brief History

In 2019, the ITF introduced the ITF World Tennis Ranking and a new points structure. With the addition of ITF Ranking points, the ATP no longer awarded ATP ranking points and the WTA no longer awarded WTA ranking points at 15K events. At the start of 2019, many players had both an ATP/WTA ranking as well as an ITF World Tennis Ranking. This system was not well received by players and ATP/WTA ranking points returned to ITF events in August 2019. Starting in 2020, ITF World Tennis Tour points are only awarded for qualifying matches in $15,000 and $25,000 tournaments.

ITF World Tennis Rankings can be used to enter Men's and Women's ITF World Tennis Tour tournaments. ITF World Tennis Tour Ranking points are awarded as based on the round reached. The player's best 14 Tournaments awarded in the last 52 weeks determines a player's ITF World Tennis Tour ranking.

Starting in 2020, ITF World Tennis Tour points were only awarded in the singles final round of qualifying matches in $15,000 and $25,000 tournaments.

The ITF World Tennis Ranking system is a 52-week, cumulative system in which the number of Tournament results that comprise a player's ranking is capped at a player's best fourteen (14) Tournament results for singles and best fourteen (14) Tournament results for doubles.

This system was modified in 2020 and again 2021 due to the Covid-19 pandemic. Points from all tournaments played 4th March 2019 onwards were frozen and therefore eligible to be counted amongst a player's best fourteen (14) tournaments.

Subject to any further amendments, the ITF World Tennis Ranking is scheduled to return to a 52-week system in Week 1 of 2023 by the following procedure:

- All remaining points from 2019 (March to December) drop on 4th April 2022
- Points from 2020 drop on a weekly basis from January 2022
- Points from 2021 are dropped on a weekly basis, as normal during 2022
- Ranking returns to a 52-week system in Week 1 2023
